

What I learned from this class

I took two classes in this semester. So I could get many chances to present. During this semester I presented 8 times including other classes' presentations. It was not soft for me to prepare all of them well. But as I repeated to do, I gradually felt less fear in public. The last presentation was to do in front of other students, around 50 people. I think I've done well. After I finished the job, I deeply appreciated you gave us those chances. I don't know how much I improved during a semester. But I could observe other's presentation and mine. Through the observation I learned what is better way.

Another thing I got from the class is to know myself more. To be honest, team-project is hard work. Sometimes I had to wait for members too long or face irresponsible behaviors. On the other hand, I could meet really nice guys. Through those interactions with others I got the chance to realize what kind of person I am. Thank you!

What I learned to the professor

Time. I had German class after con. Law. So I had to run to the classroom. And sometimes I was late. The stuff we dealt last semester was really difficult. Sometimes it's required to study more by oneself. If we could share references presentators used, it would be helpful. Remember I asked about the Japanese bureaucratic system. If you recommend books or any hint related with the content, students might access to information little bit easier.
